VOL. XXX. UKIAH, MENDOCINO CO., CAL.: FRIDAY, JUNE 8, 1906. NO. 38

AN OLD SETTLER PASSES BEYOND

Joe Luce passed away at his home in this city Tuesday afternoon after an illness of several days. The deceased was an exemplary citizen and was held in the highest esteem by all and his demise will be generally regretted. The sympathy of the community goes to the sorrowing family in their hour of grief. The world would be better if it possessed more men such as Joe Luce. Further comment is unnecessary. The following is a short sketch of his life.

Joseph Merry Luce, youngest son of Joseph and Dorcas Luce was born in the town of Industry, Franklin county Maine, July 1, 1838; died in Ukiah, California June 5, 1906, aged 67 years, 11 months and 4 days. His early life was spent on a farm with the usual routine of plowing and harvesting; picking up as much education by the light of the pine knot and tallow candle of evenings as possible in reading of such books as Robinson Crusoe, Pilgrim's Progress, Rollin's Ancient History and Uncle Tom's Cabin. He made good use of the meagre supply of books which fell to him from the older boys in the short terms of school from six to ten weeks in the year. With the help of a short term at the academy in Farmington, he was qualified to teach in the public schools; but not liking this profession he turned his steps westward.

He came to California in the autumn of 1860 and went directly to the mines, working in a quartz mill on Gustin ridge in Nevada county. The failing health of his father called him home in 1861, where he remained on the old farm till the spring of 1866. He was married in March, 1865 to Miss Annis M. Tinkham. His father and mother having come to California with an older brother, Joe closed out the old home and with his young wife again came to California to remain. He engaged in farming in Sutter county and afterwards in Butte county, raising wheat for five years.

In the fall of 1877 he came to Mendocino county and bought a farm south of Ukiah which he still owned when he died. He raised a family of four children, Kate E. [Mrs. St. Ores] Samuel T., Bertha [Mrs. Emery] and and Mabelle.

He lived a quiet life and put in his time in the improvement of his place. In early life he gave his heart to God and lived a true, consistent Christian. His only office was in his church where he was steward and class leader for years. He passed away beloved by his family and neighbors. He leaves besides his wife and children three brothers, Wm. H. of Lincoln, Placer county and George and Charles of Ukiah.

Redwine for Surveyor

G. R. Redwine of Covelo announces himself in this issue as a candidate for the office of county surveyor on the Democratic ticket. Guy as he is familiarly known, attended high school in this city and since graduating from that institution has spent four or five years in the field. He is a competent surveyor and has the confidence of the people in the northern part of the county where he is known and has done work. His honesty and integrity are unquestioned—two qualities that are absolutely necessary for success in any calling in life. Mr. Redwine is one of the rising young men and thinks that the young man of today should be recognized as do also a great number of its friends.

Stopping With The Gibsons.

Edward Jones was brougt down from Willits Monday on a charge of vagrancy and will spend the next twenty-five days as assitant gardener under Billy Gibson having already engaged a suite of rooms with Sheriff D. M. Gibson, in the Gibson house annex.

A NEW FRENCH RESTAURANT

J. Casabonne opened the bar in his new restatrant building near the depot Monday night and was treated to an impromptu house warming by a few of his friends. A jolly hour was spent and all voted that mine host was an ideal entertainer. The bar is one of the neatest in town and well appointed and will certainly be popular under the management of the genial Pete. Under the building is a fine wine cellar which is stocked with the choicest vintage for the benefit of the customers of the restaurant. The restaurant which will be run on French lines will be the only one of its kind in the county and will be a real novelty. It will be opened as soon as the range arrives from the east which will be in a few days. An experienced French chef has been secured and is already on the ground. Regular dinners will be served and they will be equal to anything ever served in the famous French restaurants of San Francisco. The number and variety of the courses will only be limited by the capacity of the guest. Special attention will be given to serving dinners to private parties and Mr. Casabonne is satisfied that after a trial of one of his dinners he will have a regular boarder. Several tables have already been engaged for the opening night.

Commendable Improvemsnts

Dr. G. W. Stout is getting his yard in shape and will have one of the finest in Ukiah. He has had a cement side walk laid all around the lot with cement curbs. A small space is left between the walk and the curb and this is sown to blue grass. Cement walks are also leading up to his house. With his magnificent new residence in the background it will be one of the prettiest places in town when the grass is growing. The laying of cement walks around the place is very commendable and if the example were followed by the other residence owners it would add greatly to the looks of the town and the convenience of the pedestrians.

Will Go to Canada

R. K. Lee has disposed of his property at Ornbaun and has purchased 2240 acres of land at Alberts in British Columbia. He reports that land values have gone up there since he made his perchases and that he intends going there shortly and will possibly dispose of the land and return to settle in Mendocino county. Before he makes the trip he will spend some time visiting Albert Arthur at his Calpella ranch.

Secure Plumbing Contract

Donohoe & Ganter report having secured the plumbing contract for the palatial country house that is to be erected by A. S. Mann on his ranch on the Hot springs road. The plumbing will be of the latest style and the best material will be used throughout. Mr. Mann is building the house for durability and comfort and will spare no pains expense to make it the finest in the in the county.

A Valuable Basket.

Joe Benson has fine collection of Indian baskets at the Cecille that are the work of his tribe. Among them is a large one built in the shape of a canoe It is of a very fine weave and is decorated with a perfect pattern in black. Highly colored feathers and Indian money are used as ornaments. The basket is several feet long and is valued at $100.

Death of Mrs Melton

The community was saddened Monday night by the news of the death of Mrs. Ben Melton. She was the daughter of Mrs. Robert Gibson and was a very estimable woman and was highly thought of by all who knew her. Her husband and a little daughter survive her and share the sympathy of the many friends of the family.

Two Winners From Willits

Supervisor A. J. Fairbanks of Willits has at last consented to announce himself as a candidate for the nomination for sheriff subject to the decision of the Republican convention. His political record in Mendocino county has been a brilliant one. To say that he has given good satisfaction as supervisor is putting it mildly. He was appointed to fill the vacancy in the third district some three years ago by Governor Pardee and so successful was his administration that when he ran for the position some few months latter he received a majority in every precinct over his opponent.

During his services on the board he has ever been watchful of the interests of the taxpayers and has given especial attention to the wants of the people in the third district. Further than that he has always had the funds of his district in good condition and although the Democrats, who recognized him as a powerful enemy and have never lost an opportunity to put obstacles in his path, have watched his every action they have never been able to lodge a just complaint at his door. He is the type of of public servant rarely found—honest, good natured and generous—and a man in whom his friends have every confidence simply because they have never been disappointed in him.

The office of sheriff to which Gus Fairbanks, as he is familiarly called, aspires is an office which demands particular qualification on the part of the officer. Above all things the sheriff must be a cool, level headed man and a good judge of human nature. The safety of the community depends on his cleverness; his knowledge of the county and state; and the conditions that exist. Along these lines Mr. Fairbanks is without a peer and in all Mendocino county it is doubtful if there is another as well qualified for the position.

Supervisor Fairbanks is the man the Republicans want to represent them in the sheriff fight and he will come to the convention with a solid delegation from the third supervisor district. He possesses the vim and energy to make a good fight and will be a pillar of strength to the whole ticket. His election is assured by a majority that it is the fortune of few men in politics to receive.

In this issue appears the announcement of Gordon Beachtel of Willits for the Republican nomination for supervisor of the third district. Mr. Baechtel is so well and favorably known to his constituents that eulogy at our hands is unnecessary. He has been raised in the district whose people he desires to represent in one of the most important positions it is possible for the voters to bestow and they know him and have confidence in him and why not. He is of the good old Beachtel stock—a son of S. S Baechtel—one of the earliest pioneers who labored incessantly for the upbuilding of Mendocino county and is still hale and hearty at an advanced age and commands the respect and confidence of every one, having lived to see Littlelake valley advance from a wilderness with a few scattered ranch houses to a populous and prosperous city. Like the father so is the son a good business man and a broad minded citizen. He has been successful with his own affairs and the people can safely trust him with theirs as they know there will be no experimenting. He is at present chairman of the board of trustees of the town of Willits in which position the people have had a chance to observe his executive ability and good judgment in affairs of import. His qualifications as a road man cannot be questioned as he has had an abundant experience in this line. In conclusion it can be said that Gordon Baechtel is a square man and is uptodate and progressive. His election is generally conceded by the residents of his district who have gotten so accustomed to having a good supervisor and proper representation that they will take no risks on an untried man. He will be an able successor to Supervisor Fairbanks.

COMMISSIONER VISIT ASYLUM

Secretary of State Board of Examiners Pillsbury, Secretary of State Board of Charities and Correction Gates, and N. Ellery, state commissioner of public highways made and inspection of the building of the Mendocino state hospital last Saturday. This inspection was made for the purpose of supplying to the governor and the legislature the acquired information as to the damage from the earthquake of April 18th. Mr. Ellery is an expert engineer and constructor and has made a like inspection of Agnews state hospital, the home for the feeble minded at Glenn Ellen and the Napa state hospital.

Mr. Ellery seemed to think that the administration building had been badly strained but that the main ward buildings were in very good shape.

At Agnews the buildings are a total loss, even the foundations being so badly shaken as to render them useless and not in a condition to rebuild on them.

Foster Not Married

W. A. S. Foster, the genial superintendent of the Northwestern Redwood company, has been kept busy during the past week receiving the congratulations of his friends on account of his reported marriage. He states, however, that the congratulations are premature as the happy event will not occur until the 20th of this month. The report was started a joke by some of his friends and Mr. Foster's smiling countenance was taken as an additional indication that he had joined the ranks of the benedicts.

WILL REMOVE WATER TANKS

A force of men are at work tearing down the tower of the administration building at the state hospital. The north and south towers of the ward buildings will be taken down one story and the large water tanks taken out. It is the intention to remove all the water tanks from the buildings and put them outside on a steel tower.

The Chief of Police

Warren DeMerrit appeared on the street Monday evening with his new uniform. It is needless to state that he was the cynosure of all eyes, and that even a passing automobile failed to divert the optics that were trained on him. The uniform is of blue broad cloth adorned with gold buttons which Warren states are polished five dollar pieces. The helmet is to match adorned with a wreath and the single word "Chief" in large gold letters. He also expects to wear as ornaments a billy and a pair of hand cuffs which will be concealed. When on duty in the evening he will carry a small but brilliant search light to illuminate his person as then mere sight of him is enough to strike terror to the heart of an evil doer. It is feared, however, that the beauty of his uniform and his personal charms will be 'a great attraction for the sociable drunk. It is even rumored that several are contemplating a spree so they can get to walk down the street with this modern Adonis.

The social six will give a hard time ball at the Ukiah opera bhouse Saturday evening, June 16th. Come out and enjoy yourself.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. T. E. SHARON

T. E. Sharon, one of the owners of the famous Sharon estate property, brought his family up from San Francisco last week and they will enjoy an outing at Cleveland,s in Coyote valley. Mr. Sharon is the manager of the United railroads in San Francisco and informed a PRESS reporter that about 250 cars are now running and that a shipment of fifty new ones has just arrived and will be put on the Hayes, McAllaster and Haight lines. He said that a force of 2000 men have been kept busy clearing the tracks and getting in shape for running cars. Some of the lines were running four days after the fire. He says that it has been demonstrated that the overhead trolley system is the only thing for street railroads. At a meeting of the stockholders in the Sharon estate property it was decided to tear the walls of the Palace down and commence new.

The finest hotel in the world will be erected on the site and it will be ten stories high or three stories higher than the old building. It will be a steel frame structure and a class A building throughout. The famous court and the palm garden will be embodied in the new structure. The old Grand hotel will be no more and on the site of that famous hostelry will be erected a modern office building. The work will be under the supervision of Senator Newlands.

Mr. Sharon returned to San Francisco Monday to attend to business interests.

Good Work in Vallejo

Col. Abe Marks received a report this week from Capt. C. A. Pracht of Washington company, U. R. K. P. of Vallejo of the work done by that company during the San Francisco fire. For the first few days the company was in San Francisco and the members were scattered among the fire fighters and dynamiting crews. When the refugees commenced pouring into Vallejo the mayor at once realized the necessity of having a body of trained men in charge of the town and as all the marines were on duty in San Francisco he called out the Washington company. The boys responded to a man. They made over fifty arrests and succeeded in keeping the tough element subdued. The mayor states that the town was never before so well patrolled and so ordarly and praised the company in such a way as to let them know that their services were highly appreciated. Col. Marks is quite proud of the company, it is needless to say.

Mountain Grown Fruit

E. V. D. Paul, the owner of the Paulheim ranch, is disposing of all his berry and fruit crop this year to the local merchants and will do no peddling. Parties desiring fruit can leave their orders with their grocer and be assurgd of getting the best. Mr. Paul is enterprising and is planning an advertising campaign to keep his products before the people and it is his intention to market nothing but the best so that the fruit from the Paulheim ranch will become a byword with the housewife.

Pleased With Ukiah

Engineer Conry of the local electric light plant returned Sunday from Point Richmond where he had been to visit his parents. They have only recently moved to this state and Mr. Conry was pleasantly surprised when he received a letter from them and decided on a visit at once. His father Rev. H. W. Conry, D. D., returned with him and spent several days looking over the valley.

The bank is located in the new brick building recently erected by Leek & Grant and has very comfortable quarters. A general banking business will be transacted and it is needless to say that the new institution will be a great benefit and convenience to the business men of that thriving community. Mr. Harris, the assistant cashier is a Hopland business man and stands well with the people and the Cloverdale people are to be congratulated on having secured his services. It is reported that six new accounts were opened as soon as the branch bank commenced business.

Messrs. Brush and Shaw report that the Bank of Cloverdale is planning other improvements and that they have commenced the erection of the new building for the home bank in Cloverdale. The new building will be of the Mission style of architecture and will be modeled on the same lines as the Missions Savings bank building of San Francisco. The structure will be of pressed brick and occupy a space of 26x70 feet and be one story. The new building will be one of the neatest in the country and speaks well for the progress of the Cloverdale people.

Upon certification by the recorder of the faculties that they have been in attendance at the summer session a return ticket will be sold to them for two dollars. The return trip may be made at these special rates any time up to August thirty-first. The time limit of the tickets gives one ample opportunity to study the unique situation in San Francisco either before or after the summer session. There are plenty of accommodations in Berkeley, and board and lodging may be had at very reasonable prices. It would be well, however, for students to write to Recorder James Sutton, Califonia Hall, Berkeley, California, and arrange to have reservations made for them. The summer school will be condnoted along exactly the same lines as though the San Francisco calamity had not occurred and from present indications the attendance will exceed that of any previous years.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

of narrow passage. At the end of it, in front of the overturned table, they halted suddenly, for there before them, skull emblazoned, shield on arm, his long sword lifted and a terrible wrath burning in his eyes, stood the old knight like a wolf at bay and by his side, bow in hand, the beauteous lady Rosamund, clad in all her festal broideries.

"Yield you!" cried a voice. By way of answer the bowstring twanged, and an arrow sped home to its feathers through the throat of the speaker, so that he went down, grabbing at it, and spoke no more forever.

As he fell clattering to the floor Sir Andrew cried in a great voice:

"We yield not to pagan dogs and poisoners! A D'Arcy! A D'Arcy! Meet D'Arcy, meet death!"

Thus for the last time did old Sir Andrew utter the warcry of his race, which he had feared would never pass his lips again. His prayer had been heard, and he was to die as he had desired.

"Down with him; seize the princess!" said a voice. It was that of Georgios, no longer humble with a merchant's obsequious whine, but speaking in tones of cold command and in Arabic.

For a moment the swarthy mob hung back, as well they might in face of that glittering sword. Then with a cry of "Salah-ed-din! Salah-ed-din!" on they surged, with flashing spears and scimiters. The overthrown table was in front of them, and one leaped upon its edge, but as he leaped the old knight, all his years and sickness forgotten now, sprang forward and struck downward so heavy a blow that in the darkling mouth of the passage the sparks streamed out and where the Saracen's head had been appeared his heels. Back Sir Andrew stepped again to win space for his sword play, while round the ends of the table broke two fierce faced men. At one of them Rosamund shot with her bow, and the arrow pierced his thigh, but as he fell he struck with his keen scimiter and shore the end off the bow, so that it was useless. The second man caught his foot in the bar of the oak chair, which he did not see, and went down prone, while Sir Andrew, taking no heed of him, rushed with a shout at the crowd who followed and, catching their blows upon his shield, rained down others so desperate that, being hampered by their very number, they gave before him and staggered back along the passage.

"Guard your right, father!" cried Rosamund. He sprang round to see the Saracen who had fallen on his feet again. At him he went, nor did the man wait the onset, but turned to fly, only to find his death, for the great sword caught him between neck and shoulders. Now a voice cried:

"We make poor sport with this old lion, and lose men. Keep clear of his claws and whelm him with spear casts."

But Rosamund, who understood their tongue, sprang in front of him and answered in Arabic:

"Aye, through my breast, and go tell that tale to Saladin!"

Then, clear and calm, was heard the command of Georgios. "He who harms a hair of the princess dies. Take them both living if you may, but lay no hand on her. Stay, let us talk."

Rosamund touched her father and pointed to the man who lay upon the floor with an arrow through his thigh. He was struggling to his knee, raising the heavy scimiter in his hand. Sir Andrew lifted his sword as a husbandman lifts a stick to kill a rat, then let it fall again, saying:

"I fight not with the wounded. Drop that steel and get you back to your own folk."

The fellow obeyed him—yes, and even touched the floor with his forehead in salaam as he crawled away, for he knew that he had been given his life and that the deed was noble toward him who had planned a coward's stroke. Then Georgios stepped forward, no longer the same Georgios who had sold poisoned wine and eastern broideries, but a proud looking, high browed Saracen clad in the mail which he wore beneath his merchant's robe, and in place of the crucifix wearing on his breast a great star shaped jewel, the emblem of his house and rank.

"Sir Andrew," he said, "hearken to me, I pray you. Noble was that act," and he pointed to the wounded man being dragged away by his fellows, "and noble has been your defense, well worthy of your lineage and your knighthood. It is a tale that my master," and he bowed as he said the word, "will love to hear if it pleases Allah that we return to him in safety. Also you will think that I have played a knave's trick upon you, overcoming the might of those gallant knights, Sir Godwin and Sir Wulf, not with sword blows, but with drugged wine, and treating all your servants in like fashion, since not one of them can shake off its fumes before tomorrow's light. So, indeed, it is a very scurvy trick, which I shall remember with shame to my life's end. Yet bethink you how we stand, and forgive us. We are but a little company of men in your great country, hidden, as it were, in a den of lions, who, if they saw us, would slay us without mercy. That, indeed, is a small thing, for what are our lives, of which your sword has taken tithe, and not only yours, but those of the twin brethren on the quay by the water?"

"I thought it," broke in Sir Andrew contemptuously. "Indeed, that deed was worthy of you—twenty or more men against two."

Georgios held up his hand.

"Judge us not harshly," he said, speaking slowly, who for his own ends wished to gain time, "you who have read the letter of our lord. The letter failed, for neither you nor the princess"—and he bowed to Rosamund—"could be bought. More, the whole country was awakened; you were surrounded with armed men; the knightly brethren kept watch and ward over you. Therefore, because I must I, who am a prince and an emir, became a dealer in drugged wine.

"Now hearken. Yield you, Sir Andrew, who have done enough to make your name a song for generations, and accept the love of Salah-ed-din, whose word you have, the word that, as you know well, cannot be broken, which I, the lord El-Hassan—for no meaner man has been sent upon this errand—plight to you afresh. Yield you and save your life and live on in honor.

"For know, this deed must be done. Did we return without the princess Rose of the World we should die, every one of us, and did we offer her harm or insult, then more horribly than I can tell you. This is no fancy of a great king that drives him on to the stealing of a woman, although she be of his own high blood. The voice of God has spoken to Salah-ed-din by the mouth of his angel Sleep. Thrice has Allah spoken in dreams, telling him who is merciful that through your daughter and her nobleness alone can countless lives be saved. Therefore, sooner than she should escape him, he would lose even the half of all his empire. Outwit us, defeat us now, capture us, cause us to be tortured and destroyed, and other messengers would come to do his bidding—indeed, they are already on the way. Moreover, it is useless to shed more blood, seeing it is written in the books that this lady, Rose of the World, must return to the east, where she was begot, there to fulfill her destiny and save the lives of men. Sir Andrew, the time grows short, and I must fulfill my mission. Will you take the peace of Salah-ed-din or force his servants to take your life?"

The old knight listened, resting on his reddened sword; then he lifted his head and spoke:

"I am aged and near my death, Wine Seller Georgios, or Prince El-Hassan, whichever you may be. In my youth I swore to make no pact with Paynims, and in my eld I will not break that vow."

"Then, princess," answered El-Hassan, "bear me witness throughout the east that I am innocent of your father's blood. On his own head be it, and on yours," and for the second time he blew upon his whistle.

An Explorer's Stratagem.

Sir Harry Johnston, the famous explorer, once escaped from a very tight corner in Africa by a queer stratagem. A score or two of murderous natives had surrounded his tent, into which, before rushing it, they sent an envoy. The envoy was told the smallpox was in the camp, and a wretched Albino was sent out as the awful example. In five minutes the scared tribesmen had vanished. As Sir Harry well knew, they feared the "white disease" more than all the inventions of Maxim.

ALPINE AVALANCHES.

These Deadly Snowslides Are Often Started by a Sound.

There are many kinds of avalanches There are the powdery avalanche, the creeping variety, the glacier avalanche and others. When the sun strikes upon the illimitable snow fields and the snow begins to move the mass in its descent gathers weight and force, tearing away enormous rock masses and millions of tons of soil, until at length, with a noise like thunder, it expends its fury on the level floor of a valley where defenseless villages may be.

A great avalanche of this kind has an invisible forerunner almost as destructive as itself. This is the terrific hurricane caused by the air it displaces. It is no common sight to see giant trees uprooted, broken and twisted, the boughs wrenched from the trunk, leaves and needles clean stripped from the twigs and the very tops wrenched from a larch forest before ever the avalanche itself has struck the wood.

It is on still days when a lighted candle will hardly flicker in the icy air that the danger is greatest. The snow has been falling quietly yet heavily for several days and has settled on precipitous slopes above the village to an immense depth. It needs but the slightest and almost imperceptible cause to set it in motion. Had the wind been blowing it would never have amassed to such depths, but would have slipped down in lesser quantities. On such days the postilion muffles the bells of his team; the father will chide his child for slamming the door. Three enormous avalanches were once started in Switzerland merely by the sounding of the "Visi," or the first bell for church service. A bird alighting, an icicle falling from a rock—and the monster begins his downward rush. Villagers sometimes try to bring down avalanches at an advantageous time by firing off guns or even by shouting.—Woman's Home Companion.

LOOSE TEETH.

Sometimes They Are the Result of Nervous Troubles.

He was an honest dentist, and no one could have accused him of tinkering with a sound molar unless it actually needed attention. When the handsomely gowned woman patient came to him and complained that her teeth were getting loose and she was afraid she would lose them he gave her some good advice and charged her nothing, although it was worth a good stiff fee.

"There is nothing in the world the matter with your teeth," he said. "Each one is as sound as a new dollar. But you should consult a nerve specialist. Evidently you have been worrying a great deal lately."

The woman confessed that she had. Her sister had been very ill, and she had been compelled to help nurse her.

"Quit it unless you wish to lose your teeth," commanded the dentist. "Also you should put yourself under the care of a physician. In some nervous diseases the outward symptom is a shrinking of the gums. This is not an unfailing sign, however. Some persons lose their teeth through a shriveling of the gums on account of an excess of uric acid in the system. If they drank plenty of water the trouble would disappear. I have had several patients whom I have cured simply by getting them to drink plenty of water.

"The gums are pretty good indicators of the general health. Persons whose gums bleed frequently think there is something the matter with their teeth. The trouble is constitutional instead of local. A good tonic would put them on their feet, and this, accompanied by plenty of exercise in the open air, would stop the bleeding of the gums."—New York Press.

An Egyptian Delicacy.

Every country has its own little delicacies, and Egypt is famous for its kabobs. The kabob is broiled meat, but is broiled in so ridiculous a fashion as to be really funny. The peddler uses a little charcoal furnace, something like that in use by our plumbers. In it he keeps up a small but hot fire. Attached to the side of the furnace are a lot of iron skewers. When a customer approaches, the hawker takes a small piece of meat, mutton or goat, the latter being the most popular, cuts it with a sharp knife into a long ribbon, winds it around the skewer and places it upon the charcoal fire. Some of the drippings are collected and, with a little salt and spice, make a pleasant sauce for the kabob when it is done.

A Ghost Story.

A London daily tells a short modern ghost story. A man was traveling on a northbound train out of London. Opposite him was a silent stranger, his only companion. Between London and Derby no word passed. Then, as the train drew out of Derby, he said pleasantly, "Good line, this, sir, eh?" The stranger replied, "I think it's a beastly bad line. I was killed on it two years ago."
